Mario Romera's research and work focuses on the exploration of new ways of developing participatory art experiences. With a background in visual arts, his works are based on individual or collective practices from everyday situations, mixing life with art as much as possible.

His projects aim to improve life through art, by stimulating a conscious critique of the 'normality' we live in. This happens by linking living concepts with the social values of community, economics and politics and exploring new ways to build possible alternatives for them.
